

George W Singh and Manmohan Bush_A Story of an Eternal Friendship

// thÉrÉ suḡh aub mÉrÉ //

// mÉrÉ duḡh aub thÉrÉ //

As President George W Bush and Prime Minister Manmohan Singh dream of a nuclear deal, both of them want to make maximum profit and lose nothing. To put it in other words, they want to lose their 'internal problems' by sharing energy resources.

'Experts' unanimously believe that India is driven by its society! "Bush-Singh Condensation", better known as 'Nuke Deal' is a hot and not so widely discussed hypothesis in socio economical, socio political, and socio scientific circles of India. Although many in its society still do not understand 123 of it and many still believe that a lot is 'hyd'den, Dr Singh has full confidence in the deal. Mr Bush, in a stroke of his 'genius' exulted and told India's neighbours that if they wanted to be treated like India then they should be like India.

Mr Bush cannot run for US presidency again for obvious reasons. However, he would try his best to keep Ms Hilary Clinton at bay. 'Experts' say that Mr Bush's stay in the White House is a prerequisite for the nuke deal to go through. His best friend Dr Singh, a politician by accident, is not so well placed. No one wants general elections in India any time soon. His government has nearly 18 months still 'Left' in the office. If the Indian Congress Party dares its major parliamentary ally the Red Indian Left, and signs the Nuke Deal, then elections are a certainty early next year. Coalition politics in India began on ethical grounds and very soon people recognized it as a collision exercise, where participants flex their muscles, talking non issues to show who the boss is.

It is well known that Dr Singh, an extraordinary economist has promised Mr Bush, in his own words an average businessman, a fair deal. Unfortunately, two good friends cannot decide the foreign policies of two huge democracies. This is more than true in the present case where one of the two friends and one of the two democracies is fractured, forced, and directionless. USA has iterated time and again that TIME is a factor. The two friends know it too well not to wait, and waiting will cause irrevocable damage to them and their countries' stature and credibility.

K G Srikanta Dani

November 1st, 2007